We are only acquainted with this book through a notice of it appearing in our contemporary the Rangoon Gazette, in which we find the writer's conclusions summarised. Mr. Sugssisa monometallist, but his one metal is silver not gold. Bimetallism he advocates merely as an intermediary step. The idea of a universal gold at an early date. currency he declares to be utterly impracticable, as there is not and never can be enough gold to serve the purpose; it is silver which must ultimately become the the simple reason that it can be produced in sufficient quantities while gold cannot. pyrites have been decomposed by external ! influences, and also (e) in the deeper zone of sulphides, only the two first zones are of importance as regards its production Modern appliances enable the miner to go deeper, but with increasing depth gold becomes scarcer and the particles smaller until it disappears altogether. The great mass of gold lies near the surface, and is consequent ly only found in large workable quantities on the outskirts of civilization. Until :187 the world's production of the metal had been decreasing for some years; since then it has been fairly constant, until last year, when there was an increase of six per cent, and this increase may be continued for some time owing to the large production in Africa and some other causes. Only 44 per cent. however, of the outturn of gold new comes for Monday next (Founder's Day) at the Hongfrom alluvia, whereas in 1875 the proportion from the the same strata was 88 per cent. The miners have now to go deeper, where "pinch out" as the miners say, and though in Queensland and Africa it is still possible letter luck than the last. to work in the gossan, there is every reason for believing that the ratio between gold and silver will never be re-established by now see what Mr. Sugas has to say about silver. This metal, he tells us, appears the alluvium in small quantities only; in the PRALINES, SUGARED ALMONDS, gossan it is sometimes found as pure silver ore and sometimes in combination; in the sulphide zone it is generally in combination with sulphur and arsenic; sometimes it disappears in this zone with increase of depth, but when it is found in combination with ing through Japan for the present. volcanie rocks, as in Mexico, Bolivia, Peru, and Chili, for instance, no diminution takes place in the quantities found, and nothing but the increasing heat will stop its extraction from any depth. Reference is then kong a few years ago met the same fate. made to the improvements in the methods metallurgical process, this loss baving been per cent. The average cost of production, we are told, is only 8d. per rupee-(say 1s. 8d. per dollar!)—but on this point we are not prepared to accept Mr. Sugsa's statement. since it is notorious that many mines have had to close during the last twelve or eighteen months because they did not pay the cost of working. However, Mr. Suess is emphatically of opinion that there is duction of silver. It exists in abundance, it will be produced as long as there is any profit, and the disproportion in the relative carried. values of gold and silver must increase as time goes on. The silver supply of the world can be increased to almost any extent, whereas the gold supply is getting exhausted.

Such is the cheerful prospect presented from the geological point of view. If Mr. Suess's theory and facts are correct the time must come when England and the other the meantime the divergence in exchange, with its embarassing effects on trade, must go on increasing. That the Currency Conference should have decided against making silver do half the work and so lessening the strain on gold is as regrettable as it is surprising. The Conference has not yet dissolved, but the telegraphic intelligence thus far received of the course of its deliberations precludes all hope of a satisfactory issue. Things will find their level in time no doubt, and trade will adapt itself to the altered conditions, but the next few years will be an anxious and difficult period for all engaged in commerce between silver and gold using countries. The present panie in the London silver market arises from a probably exaggerated idea of the rate | Valse ...... "Zaleika".... at which the gulf between gold and silver is likely to widen, but certain it is that there can be no stability of exchange while the leading nations of Europe refuse to recognise silver as money. If India should unfortunately be induced to join in the scramble for gold, widespread disaster would mevitably ensue, but of that there is happily little probability.
